Selina has decades of experience delivering successful projects in a variety of industry contexts. With a focus on IT and business change initiatives, her project and program management experience spans multiple sectors including banking, aviation, automotive, and financial services. This experience has honed her ability to draw from across the spectrum of delivery approaches – from predictive, to adaptive – to suit the initiative at hand.

As an AIPM and AQF Assessor, Selina also has many years of experience in assessing other project professionals from across industry for project management qualifications and professional certifications.

Complementing her technical nous in project management are Selina's interpersonal skills and business acumen – essential for engaging effectively with diverse stakeholders in complex, political environments.

Selina has long-standing affiliations with leading professional bodies in the field, including the Australian Institute of Project Management (where she is currently NSW Vice President), the Project Management Institute, the School of Project Management at the University of Sydney, and the Global Alliance for the Project Professions (GAPPS).

In every interaction with clients, students, and associates, Selina effortlessly combines her incredible (and infectious) growth mindset with her extensive project management knowledge and experience. With her easy, open communication style, Selina is generous with her feedback and advice, which students consistently comment on as a highlight of their professional development journey.
